We Day talks climate change, human rights

Global warming. Former UN High Commissioner for Human Rights says now is the time to reverse climate change

SHANE GIBSON
shane.gibson@metronews.ca

Former UN High Commissioner for Human Rights and past president of Ireland Mary Robinson had one message for the thousands of young people taking part in Wednesday's We Day in Winnipeg — climate change is real, and it's a real problem for human rights.

"We don't take climate change seriously enough," Robinson told media after she addressed the 16,000 students who filled MTS Centre for We Day Manitoba. "It is from the human rights perspective that I came to the climate issue because I saw the impact on very poor communities.... It's affecting health, it's affecting food, it's affecting water and it's affecting livelihoods.

"The Earth is hurting, but so are people, millions of them."

Robinson used her allotted speaking time during the daylong inspirational session — which included performances from rapper Kardinal Offishall and rockers Hedley — to drive home her message that now is the time to reverse climate change.

"I mentioned to the young people that there was a very, very important report coming out this Sunday. I said it'll be more scary than Halloween," she said. "It's the report of the International Panel on Climate Change and it will tell us that we need to act rapidly because we're running out of time.

"The great thing is that I think young people get it."

We Day co-founder Craig Kielburger said messages like Robinson's are the reason he and his brother started the touring, stadium-sized event, which makes stops to speak to students at major cities across Canada, the U.S. and around the world.

However, the message didn't prevent a commercial about Ford vehicles from being broadcast to the audience after Robinson's speech.

Cabinet split in support of Selinger, rebel ministers

Speaking up. More ministers voice their siding with both the premier and those asking him to resign

The future of embattled Manitoba Premier Greg Selinger remained unclear Wednesday as some of his caucus members said they support both him and the handful of cabinet rebels who say he should consider retiring.

"If the premier says he's staying, my job is to work with him and to work with my caucus and move forward," Tourism Minister Ron Lemieux told reporters called to his office.

Lemieux also had praise for the cabinet ministers who said earlier this week that Selinger should consider leaving to try to stop the NDP's slide in opinion polls. He said he hoped the rebels would not be demoted to the backbenches.

"These are not only friends of mine and my colleagues, but they're very bright political people, and with a real passion for the province. (Demoting them) is not my call and I would personally hope that would never happen."

Kevin Chief, children and youth opportunities minister, said he firmly backs Selinger, but also supports his cabinet colleagues and wants to focus on his job instead of the public party spat.

"The premier has always supported me in my job. So have my cabinet colleagues and so has caucus, and so have many members of the community. When you want to get things done, you reciprocate that support."

Selinger said Tuesday he would stay on as premier and lead the party into the next election despite public criticism from some of his top ministers.

Health Minister Erin Selby, Justice Minister Andrew Swan and Municipal Government Minister Stan Struthers said Selinger has failed to persuade voters that raising the provincial sales tax last year was the right thing to do. They called on him to consider stepping down.

Jobs and the Economy Minister Theresa Oswald and Finance Minister Jennifer Howard were more measured in their criticism, but urged Selinger to reflect on his future given the party's standing in polls.

Other ministers are standing firmly behind him, although less than half his caucus was there Tuesday when he announced he wouldn't step down.

Selinger, who left the door open to a cabinet shuffle, was in Flin Flon on Wednesday. For the time being, he faces a divided cabinet and caucus and the possibility of a leadership review next March.

Lawyer's request may delay baby autopsies

The lawyer for a woman accused of hiding the remains of six infants in a Winnipeg storage locker is asking the court to delay autopsies of the bodies even though they are "90 per cent" complete. Greg Brodsky, who represents Andrea Giesbrecht, said the autopsies shouldn't go ahead without an independent pathologist present.

Giesbrecht, 40, sat occasionally biting her nails and pursing her lips as Brodsky told an emergency hearing that the independent pathologist would observe the examination "with his hands in his pockets and Velcro on his mouth."

"I'm saying for the 155th time, all I want is a pathologist who is competent and accredited to ... observe the autopsies," he told Judge Brian Corrin Wednesday. "I don't want any further autopsy to be done until this court has ruled."

The hearing Wednesday was dominated by Brodsky and lawyers for the Crown, the medical examiner's office and Winnipeg police arguing over who had standing to speak to the request. The hearing was eventually adjourned until Friday when all sides will argue over who can make submissions.

Giesbrecht, who showed no emotion during the hearing, is charged with six counts of concealing a body and one count of breaching probation. She has been in custody since the remains were discovered Oct. 20 by employees at a U-Haul storage locker who had gone in to conduct inventory since the bill hadn't been paid.

At Wednesday's hearing, a lawyer for the chief medical examiner's office said the autopsies were "90 per cent" complete. David Gisser said the rest of the examination could be delayed for up to two weeks without compromising the remains. But he objected to Brodsky's "very unusual request."

Like students getting ready for the first day of school, city council's class of eight incoming freshmen is excitedly making preparations to be sworn into office next week.

But they won't be buying new backpacks and runners; instead they'll be brushing up on city hall procedures and planning to put their professional lives on hold for the next four years.

As the new councillor for Winnipeg's biggest ward, St. Boniface's Matt Allard isn't wasting any time. He has already begun meeting with community groups, resigned as CEO of the St. Boniface Chamber of Commerce and surrendered his spot on a few volunteer boards. "I'm hoping to bring that style of leadership to the ward level now," he said.

Gillingham said he is also getting help from outgoing Coun. Scott Fielding.

Charleswood-Tuxedo's Marty Morantz said he'll have to make minor adjustments to the management of his property investment firm, but he has already started tackling some of the basics of his new job, like figuring out where his office will be, making arrangements for parking and thinking about hiring an executive assistant.

Morantz said he's familiar with committee structures and processes at city hall, "but there's nothing like being there. I'm really looking forward to having an impact on municipal policy."

A blow (in the face) against racism

'Social experiment.'
Bystander at bus stop in Hamilton slugs
actor spewing
anti-Muslim taunts

Its creators call it a "social experiment" spurred by the gunman's shooting rampage at Parliament Hill in Ottawa last week.

But their three-minute video posted to YouTube Monday shines a spotlight on Hamilton and a handful of people who stand up against anti-Muslim taunts hurled at a bus stop outside Jackson Square.

A young man who identifies himself as Devin Giamou spews the racist remarks.

His anti-Muslim vitriol is put on, just acting for the experiment, but Giamou gets more than a stiff rebuke.

He tells a small clutch of people outside Jackson Square another young man with a beard and in white traditional Muslim dress (who's also an actor for the experiment) shouldn't get on the bus because "he could be armed with explosives."

Giamou's character says, "I don't feel safe so I can't take this bus here," referring to last week's shooting spree, which began with the fatal shot that killed Cpl. Nathan Cirillo of Hamilton.

"I want to take him to another bus. I don't feel safe."

One man immediately pushes back: "You know, you can't stereotype and judge people by their clothes, or their nationality or anything else, you know what I mean?"

What happened there, it was an incident of fanatics."

A woman pipes up, too: "It was awful and tragic, but I don't think that's any reason to persecute someone just because of what they're wearing."

But Giamou keeps making his case, eventually trying to physically remove his fellow actor. At that point, someone jumps to the Muslim man's defence and slugs Giamou in the face.

After a brief clip that shows him talking to a police officer, Giamou, who has a bloody face, offers this conclusion:

"So the social experiment had a negative ending to it, but it's positive because he stood up for him and I appreciate that, that's good, that's good."

Indonesia close to laying charges against Canadian teacher: Family

Family members say the case against a former Calgary private school teacher detained in Indonesia for more than three months, has been turned over to a prosecutor and charges are expected to be laid by week's end.

Neil Bantleman, who taught at Calgary's Webber Academy for a decade, was arrested July 14 after claims of sexual assault arose from kindergarten-aged students at Jakarta International School.

Bantleman and his wife, Tracy, teach at the school.

He's been held in a Jakarta jail along with another teacher, but thousands have rallied around the pair and say no evidence has been presented to suggest they're guilty.

Metro spoke exclusively with Bantleman in a message interview from his cell earlier this month.

Much like his wife and JIS headmaster have in past interviews, Bantleman likened his case to the 1980s McMartin preschool trial in California in which one parent's allegations of abuse prompted mass hysteria, with claims that hundreds of kids attending the preschool had been victimized and subjected to satanic rituals.

"For those doubting my innocence, there really is nothing to say," he said at the time.

"Anyone familiar with the McMartin case and has read about the details of this case and doesn't believe we are innocent, then there is nothing that will convince them otherwise."

Ghomeshi choked, slapped me, Trailer Park Boys actor alleges

'It was shocking.'
Eight women now
accusing ex-CBC host of abusive behaviour

Eight women from across Canada now accuse former CBC host Jian Ghomeshi of abusive behaviour ranging from allegations of beating and choking without consent, to workplace sexual harassment.

The allegations the Star is probing range from 2002 to the present.

One of the women, popular Canadian television actor Lucy DeCoutere, has agreed to be identified. DeCoutere, who plays Lucy on Trailer Park Boys, recalls an incident in 2003 when she alleges Ghomeshi, without warning or consent, choked her to the point she could not breathe and then slapped her hard three times on the side of her head.

"He did not ask if I was into it. It was never a question. It was shocking to me. The men I have spent time with are loving people," said DeCoutere, who, when she is not acting on the television show, is a captain in the Royal Canadian Air Force in New Brunswick.

Ghomeshi, 47, was fired Sunday from his job as host of Q, a flagship radio show of the publicly funded broadcaster. Ghomeshi has alleged in a lawsuit filed the next day that CBC made a "moral judgment" that his practice of a bondage-sadism sex life was wrong.

He is suing the CBC for $55 million for defamation and breach of trust and the corporation has said it will "vigorously" defend itself against Ghomeshi's lawsuit.

The Star has presented Ghomeshi, his lawyers and his public relations staff with the allegations in this story and they have yet to respond.

He met some of the women during his 2012 tour to promote 1982, his bestselling memoir about a year in high school in Thornhill. Others he met at film festivals, at music or CBC events, or at the CBC workplace.

Two of the women who allege they were physically assaulted also say that before the alleged assaults in his home he introduced them to Big Ears Teddy, a stuffed bear, and he turned the bear around just before he slapped or choked them, saying that "Big Ears Teddy shouldn't see this."

One of the new women to come forward is a woman in her mid-20s who was a CBC producer in Montreal who dreamed of being on Q. He met her at one of his book signings.

Ghomeshi allegedly took her to his hotel room, threw her against the wall and was very "forceful" with her. She said she performed oral sex "to get out of there." The woman, who still works in the media but not at CBC, said she decided not to complain because she feared he was too powerful.

"I felt like Jian was CBC god," she said. She is the second CBC woman to come forward with allegations of sexual harassment by Ghomeshi. The CBC has announced they are investigating the first case, where Ghomeshi allegedly told a CBC staffer he wanted to "hate f—" her.

Don't brand shooter a 'terrorist,' Mulcair says

The shooter in last week's deadly attack in Ottawa was a criminal, but not a terrorist — according to NDP Leader Tom Mulcair.

"I don't think we have enough evidence to use that word," Mulcair said at the end of an emotional party caucus meeting Wednesday, one week after Michael Zehaf Bibeau opened fire on a soldier and then on security guards just outside the government and Opposition caucus meeting rooms.

"When you look at the history of the individual involved, you see a criminal act, of course," he added.

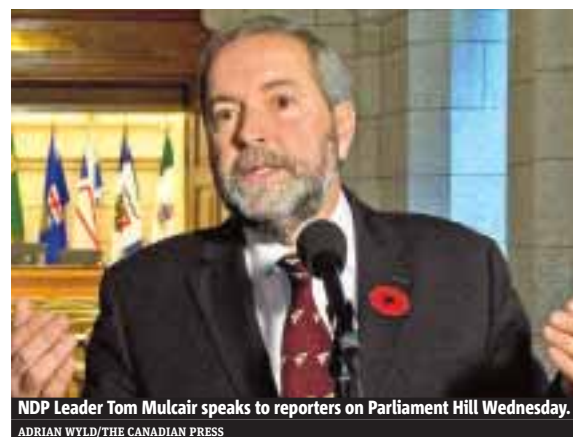

"But ... I think that we're not in the presence of a terrorist act in the sense that we would understand it."

Mulcair's comments were met with immediate condemnation from Conservatives and the leader of the Liberal party.

"The RCMP was clear, these were acts of terrorism, (so) these were acts of terrorism," said Justin Trudeau.

"It's ridiculous," added Conservative MP Peter Kent.

"It was clearly an act of terror (based on) his background and motivation."

The remark re-emphasized a stark ideological divide in the House of Commons about how to react to the deaths of two Canadian soldiers last week.

Mulcair said it's obvious that Zehaf Bibeau had mental issues, and that his actions in killing a soldier at the National War Memorial and firing on security on Parliament Hill were reprehensible.

But Mulcair said the latest information about the lone shooter indicates he should be defined merely as a criminal.

He later seemingly clarified his comments in the House of Commons, referring to the differences between a criminal act carried out by someone with a history of mental issues and an act of terror carried out by an "organized" individual or group.

Canadian students: Our gold mines aren't shining example in Caribbean

Dominican Republic.

Ontario women were appalled by impact of Barrick Gold, Goldcorp on locals while on holiday; documentary now in the works

Three Canadian students were shocked by what they found last winter during a trip to the Dominican Republic. Canadian mining companies, they say, are destroying lives in the country due to the contamination of the land surrounding their mine.

"We visited the Barrick Gold mine, and while we were there, we spoke with a woman named Juliana (Rodriguez). She is 82 years old and has lived in the area for all of her life," Klaire Gain said. "She told us the last four years, which (has seen) Barrick Gold mining in the region, have been the worst years of her life."

Now, Gain, Claire Morrow and Natasha Jimenez — all from London, Ont., and recent graduates of the social justice and peace program at King's University College — are working to show the world what they witnessed.

Using their own money, and some brought in through fundraisers, the trio travelled back to the region this summer. They spent two months living in the area, working on farming co-ops, meeting and talking with as many residents, along with environmental and academic experts, as they could. They also hired former CBC cameraman Mark Visser, and flew him to the region where he filmed more than 100 hours of footage for a documentary expected to be ready by spring 2015.

The mine that's the focus of their work is located in Pueblo Viejo. It's 60 per cent owned by Barrick with the remaining 40 per cent owned by Goldcorp,

In 2013, the mine produced 488,000 ounces of gold, making it the largest in Barrick's operations — and the company says it's doing good, not bad, things for the community. Barrick's mine was built on the site of an abandoned state-run operation, and, when the company moved in, waterways were polluted and causing problems, spokesman Andy Lloyd said.

All waters that have a direct connection to the Barrick site have since been cleaned up, Lloyd said, noting the

Not getting carried away

The trio's expectations for the documentary are realistic. "We understand that we are not going to make this documentary and all these companies are going to stop," Morrow said. "We understand all of these companies are going to be there for at least another decade. We understand the hypocrisy of having our computers here."

"What we are passionate about, is, hopefully, (the documentary) will inspire other people to think about their consumerism and hopefully spur other economies."

company's involvement has served as a "catalyst for a huge environmental cleanup of the whole area" and has pumped money into the economy.

Barrick has also offered King's students and staff a chance to come to the mine itself and meet with people working on the effort, he added. Still, people like Juliana Rodriguez, the woman the students met on their first trip, aren't happy. Rodriguez had a clear message she wanted the group to bring back to Canada.

"She looked at us, with tears in her eyes and said, 'We are dying because people in your country want to wear gold rings on their fingers,'" Gain recounted.

She told them: "Please do something, please tell people about this, please tell your government, because people here are not listening to us," Gain said. The communities in peril "are rural communities, the residents live off the land and their farms were sustainable," Morrow said. One man they visited had been farming livestock and growing pineapples for years. Now, Morrow said, the livestock are dying and he can't sell the pineapples because they are grown on contaminated land. MARK SPOWART/ FOR METRO IN LONDON, ONT.

Military fretted over Iqaluit's 'dumpcano,' documents show

Air tests carried out.

Cautious approach was taken prior to this summer's Arctic training program

The military fretted over fumes coming off Iqaluit's notorious dump fire during this summer's Arctic training exercise, new documents show.

Personnel deployed to Nunavut's capital for Operation Nanook stayed near the four-storey pile of burning trash — known locally as the "dumpcano" after the city's fire chief compared it to a volcano of garbage. Plumes of smoke rose from the smouldering heap for almost four months until firefighters finally doused it in September.

Documents obtained by The Canadian Press under the Access to Information Act show the military had jitters about putting its people so close to the dump fire and its nostrilsearing smoke.

So it tested the air and soil around the barracks and hangars where personnel would stay for the operation. Those tests showed minimal risk to personnel.

"To date, the data collected has shown that most ambient air pollution concentrations ... have been low," says a notice from the force's health protection directorate.

"However, the results indicate that the average levels of dioxins and furans continue to exceed the ambient air quality standard set by Ontario."

The province's standard is "considered to be very conservative," the directorate added, and it deemed the overall risk of dioxins and furans — chemicals produced by burning garbage, forest fires and smoking tobacco — to be low.

Nor did the military anticipate anyone would come away from the operation with anything more serious than a scratchy throat or irritated eyes from all the smoke.

Funding bid. Stem cell coalition keen to cement Canada as field leader

A coalition of Canadian stem cell advocates, researchers and charities is calling for $1.5 billion in private and public funding for stem cell therapy over the next 10 years.

The organization's action plan is aimed at cementing Canada's reputation as a stem cell leader, one that uses stem cell science to reduce suffering and death from cardiovascular diseases, cancer, diabetes, vision loss, spinal cord injuries and other conditions.

James Price, the president and CEO of the Canadian Stem Cell Foundation, says the action plan could help millions of people with new, life-changing therapies. The

Will 13 be their lucky number?

Astronomical odds. 'If we were to have a girl, I think we would go into shock,' says Kateri Schwandt, a mom to 12 boys

A western Michigan couple with 12 sons is expecting baby No. 13, and even though they're sticking to their tradition of not finding out in advance whether they're having a boy or girl, they said they'd be shocked if their streak is broken.

Jay and Kateri Schwandt's baby is due May 9, The Grand Rapids Press reported. Even though they expect it will be another boy, the couple said they would welcome either into the family.

"If we were to have a girl, I think we would go into shock," Kateri Schwandt said. "It would probably be disbelief."

If he had a choice, Jay Schwandt said he would love to have a girl, but they're just "hoping for a healthy baby." Still, he would like to see the effect of adding a girl to the mix in a household with 12 boys.

"I've experienced all the boy stuff," he said. "As long as we are having all these children, it would be really neat to experience the other side."

The couple welcomed their 12th son, Tucker, to the world on Aug. 4, 2013. Their oldest son is now 22 years old.

"The stuff that goes on in this house is all-boy — roughhousing and wrestling," Jay Schwandt said. "If there was a little girl in there, I assume it would be different."

Kateri Schwandt, after being the sole female in the family for more than two decades, said she would lean toward having one more boy.

"A little girl would be neat to have in the house, but a little boy kind of takes the pressure off," she said. "We know what we are doing. Why change things up?"

The Schwandts, who live in Rockford, which is north of Grand Rapids, consider themselves devout Roman Catholics and don't believe in using birth control. Kateri Schwandt comes from a family of 14 kids. She said she is feeling well.

"I love being pregnant," she said. "I've spent half of my life being pregnant. It's very neat and very special."

RAF fighter jets escort cargo plane to airport

Britain scrambled two Royal Air Force Typhoon jets Wednesday to intercept a Latvian cargo plane that had lost communication with air traffic control, the Ministry of Defence and police said.

The Antonov was escorted safely to Stansted Airport outside London, authorities said. Police said it received calls about people hearing a "loud bang" in the Kent area, caused by a sonic boom. The Royal Air Force apologized on Twitter, saying its jets only "go supersonic over land when necessary."

Reality show psychologist testifies at man's murder trial

A psychologist who stars on reality TV show Hoarders says a man accused of killing an animal control officer suffered from hoarding disorder and could have reacted violently to anyone trying to take away his animals.

Robin Zasio, founder of the Compulsive Hoarding Center, testified for the defence Tuesday in the murder trial of Joseph Corey, 67. Corey is accused of shooting and killing Roy Marcum, 45, in 2012, as Marcum arrived at Corey's home to remove animals. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

'Courageous' Malala receives Children's Nobel

Pakistani teen Malala Yousafzai listens to a question at the World's Children's Prize ceremony in Mariefred, Sweden, Wednesday. Malala is the first ever to receive the Nobel Peace Prize and the World's Children's Prize in the same year. The awards organization cited the 17-year-old for "her courageous and dangerous fight for girls' right to education." Yousafzai, who became the world's youngest Nobel laureate earlier this month when she was awarded the peace prize, said she was honoured to win this prize, known also as the "Children's Nobel." Yousafzai began speaking out for the rights of girls at age 11 in her country and was shot in the head by a Taliban gunman two years ago. ### New York City. Elton John hails Pope Francis as his 'hero' at AIDS benefit Elton John called Pope Francis "my hero" for his compassion and push to accept gays in the Catholic church at his annual AIDS benefit.

John hosted the event, An Enduring Vision: A Benefit for the Elton John AIDS Foundation, Tuesday night in New York City, which raised $3.7 million. He said Francis is pushing boundaries in the church and told the crowd: "Make this man a saint now, OK?"

"Ten years ago one of the biggest obstacles in the fight against AIDS was the Catholic Church. Today we have a pope that speaks out about it," said

John, earning cheers from the attendees at Cipriani's on Wall Street.

Catholic bishops scrapped their landmark welcome to gays earlier this month, showing deep divisions at the end of a two-week meeting sought by Francis to chart a more merciful approach to ministering to Catholic families.

An earlier draft of the document offered a welcoming tone of acceptance, but that was stripped away after the bishops failed to reach consensus on a watered-down section on ministering to homosexuals.

Insensitive? Ex-governor takes blame for squabble over song at Malala event

Former Pennsylvania governor Ed Rendell on Wednesday blamed himself for a flap that led to a song being scrapped from a program honouring Pakistani teen Malala Yousafzai.

Malala was in Philadelphia last week to pick up a Liberty Medal. At the ceremony, the National Constitution Center, which gives out the medal, had agreed to play a music video by the 14-year-old daughter of a wealthy car dealer who has given to Rendell's past political campaigns.

In the song, titled America, the girl sings about how lucky she is to live in the U.S., "where the kids are safe."

Malala was shot in the head by the Taliban over her support of girls' education and went on to win the Nobel Peace Prize.

Her advisers nixed the song hours before the event, Rendell said. "They came back and said this is culturally insensitive."

The girl's family was disappointed her song wasn't being used and left the event before Malala spoke.

The family had called Rendell, the vice-chairman of the constitution centre's board, about a month ago to suggest the song be used at the event.

"I thought it would be nice to add it to the program," Rendell said. "If there was a mistake made here, it was probably mine." THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

At least 150 missing, feared dead after Sri Lankan mudslide

Monsoon season.

At least six people have been confirmed dead, with 120 tea plantation workers' homes wiped out

A mudslide triggered by monsoon rains buried scores of workers' houses at a tea plantation in central Sri Lanka on Wednesday, raising fears that hundreds have been killed.

In the chaos that followed, there was confusion about the number of dead and missing because government officials reported different figures and later reduced the number of missing by 100 without explanation.

The mudslide struck at about 7:30 a.m. and wiped out 120 workers' homes at the Koslanda tea plantation, said

Lal Sarath Kumara, an official from the Disaster Management Center. The plantation is in the town of Koslanda in Badulla district, 220 kilometres east of Colombo.

He said at least 10 people were killed and more than 250 reported missing.

Later, Disaster Management Minister Mahinda Amaraweera was quoted by media as saying that more than 100 people had been killed. Moments later he told The Associated Press that less than 100 people were missing but they could not be counted as dead.

By late Wednesday the Disaster Management Center's official numbers were six dead and 150 missing. Pradeep Kodippilly, a senior official at the centre, did not explain the changes but said the agency would be able to give the media a clearer picture by Thursday morning.

and witness accounts however suggested the disaster was enormous.

P. Arumugam, who works as a driver on the plantation, said he rushed there when he heard about the mudslide.

"Everything that I saw yesterday I could not see today — buildings, the temple and shops had all disappeared. I could only see mud," he said.

Marimuttu Navaneethan, a 28-year-old shopkeeper, said he heard a big noise and saw mud rolling down toward his home.

He and his family ran from the house, adding that 65 nearby houses were covered.

"A midwife was living in one house with six family members, and now all are missing except her husband. Their house was pushed down 200 metres and stopped near our home," he said.

State broadcaster Rupavahini showed huge mounds of earth covering the houses and muddy water still gushing from the hilltops.

Scores of children who had left for school early morning returned only to see their homes vanished without a trace along with their parents.

About 500 military personnel and civilians searched for survivors with the help of heavy earthmoving equipment. The search was later called off for the night because of rain and muddy conditions, military spokesman Brigadier Jayanath Jayawerera said.

The monsoon season in the Indian Ocean island nation runs from October through December.

Kilauea. Rainfall tempers smoke, does little to stop volcano's lava flow

Rain fell Wednesday on a red-hot river of lava creeping closer to homes and a main road in a rural Big Island town.

The precipitation wasn't enough to stem the flow, but it helped tamp down smoke pouring from the crackling molten stream consuming everything in its path, officials said.

The lava was about 255 metres from Pahoa Village Road, which leads through the community of Pahoa's downtown, Hawaii County Civil Defence officials said Wednesday. It had advanced about 82 metres since the previous day.

Pahoa is the commercial centre of the island's sprawl, mostly agricultural Puna district, south of Hilo.

The flow from Kilauea volcano entered private property there Tuesday and destroyed an empty shed. It also burned tires and other materials, prompting authorities to warn downwind residents with respiratory problems to stay indoors.

The lava flow emerged from a vent in June and until recently had been slowly weaving through uninhabited forest and pastureland.

Officials say dozens of homes, businesses and other structures are now in its projected path. Most residents there either already have left or are prepared to go.

An extra $46 per Canadian could help cut homelessness

Annual report.

Lead author argues with a budget surplus, some of that money should go to fight homelessness in Canada

Spending an extra $46 per Canadian a year on affordable housing could dramatically reduce homelessness, a new research report concludes.

Existing intervention programs can only go so far if those who find a way off the streets or out of shelters can't afford their own place to live, say researchers from York University and the Canadian Alliance to End Homelessness.

Their annual State of

Funding shortfall

The main reason behind what seems to be an intractable problem is a 46 per cent decrease in federal investment in affordable housing over the last 25 years, the report suggested.

- Affordable housing is defined as shelter that doesn't cost more than 30 per cent of a low-income person's budget.
- In 1989, $115 per capita was spent each year on adding to affordable housing stocks. Today, it's closer to $60 a year, the report found.

Homelessness in Canada study was published today.

With a budget surplus on the horizon, it's time to return to the days when federal cash was directly spent on building those places, said Stephen Gaetz, the director of the Canadian Observatory on Homelessness at York and one of the lead authors of the study.

"It's time to have a conversation — what are we going to do with that surplus?" he said.

"This is one that isn't going to break the bank. It's going to help not only end chronic homelessness but it's going to help many, many, many thousands of Canadians who are at risk of homelessness."

An estimated 235,000 Canadians a year experience homelessness at a cost to the economy of $7 billion. THE CANADIAN PRESS

A fork in the road: Fiat Chrysler spins off Ferrari

A technician works on an engine at the Ferrari plant in Maranello, Italy, in 2013. Fiat Chrysler Automobiles plans to spin off sports car maker Ferrari into a separate company, a way to unlock value in the luxury brand and distinguish it from its mass-market automaker parent. The company said Wednesday that spinning off Ferrari was part of a plan to raise capital to support the newly merged carmakers' expansion plans. Fiat Chrysler's five-year plan calls for increasing net income by five times by 2018. Fiat Chrysler CEO Sergio Marchionne said in a statement that it was "proper that we pursue separate paths for FCA and Ferrari" following the completion of the merger of Chrysler and Fiat with a listing on the New York Stock Exchange earlier this month. MARCO VASINI/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS FILE

Changes. New rail safety rules unveiled in wake of Lac-Mégantic tragedy

The Conservative government has unveiled a new set of rules aimed at improving rail safety in Canada.

They include tougher hand brake requirements, more Transport Canada staff to do audits, more research on crude oil properties and a requirement that rail companies submit training plans for review.

The new rules come after the Transportation Safety Board gave a failing grade this week to the country's two largest railways and the railroad involved in the deadly Lac-Mégantic disaster.

The TSB report said all have failed to file mandatory accident information in recent years.

The rail industry is facing heightened scrutiny following the fiery July 2013 derailment in Lac-Mégantic, Que., which killed 47 people and wiped out part of the town.

An unattended tanker train loaded with volatile crude oil broke loose from its parking spot, roared down a hill and slammed into the community.

COSTUMES: POMPEII OK, PISTORIUS NO WAY

Ladies and gentleman, start your Twitters! It's Halloween season, which means it's time to be morally outraged by dumb people dressing up offensively.

I've been flexing my thumbs in preparation. Every year people dress up as their favourite atrocities, racial stereotypes and "sexy" whatever, showing that the really scary thing about Halloween is the deep, dark depths of human obliviousness. A great Halloween costume is a thing of beauty, but many people make it clear we should have left the holiday to the kids. As a public service to mouthbreathers, here's a quick list of things you shouldn't do if you want to avoid becoming a social-media sensation.

1. DO NOT bring sexy back: Every year we're inundated with "sexy" costumes, where "sexy" is roughly equivalent to "cleavage" and/or "inappropriately cold for late October." There's nothing wrong with that, but it's a bit lazy and played out. At least stick with things where "sexy" makes sense (cats, cops, humour columnists).

HE SAYS
John Mazerolle
metronews.ca

Too many costumes are just random nouns with "sexy" in front of it, like the "sexy hockey fan" costume (making the rounds on Twitter, natch), which is just a tight costume, a purse and the words "Puck U" on the front. Erotic! Please, let's save the bunnies for Easter. And, of course, don't sexualize your kids' costumes. There's a "girl's" firefighter costume in the news this year that replaced the helmet and uniform with a fascinator and a skirt. Put gender roles aside for a second: We are raising a generation of terrible firefighters. You may roll your eyes at political correctness now, but wait until they show up at your burning house 20 years from now with a handbag instead of a hose.

2. DO NOT dress as bad news. I can pretty much guarantee one Twitter outrage this year: Someone, somewhere, is going to dress as Oscar Pistorius. I'm certain mostly because it perfectly hits the Venn diagram of being a sensitive issue on four fronts:

race, gender, gun use, and disability. What a perfect convergence for some guy to smash through in one swift movement because he thought of a "hilarious" idea while posting to #Gamergate. I hate him preemptively.

If you feel the need to dress as bad news, you have two options: fictional bad news (HAL 9000!) or bad news so old that nobody alive has any relatives who died in it. Pompeii it up.

3. DO NOT dress as any culture or race but your own: It's become an annual tradition to wait in anticipation for an NHL player to reveal himself in blackface, followed by the ceremonial cry of "What's the big deal?", followed by the communal sharing of the explanatory Wikipedia links. Soothing and reassuring, really.

Here's a helpful hint: If you're thinking, "Hmmm... something in the way of cultural appropriation this year," why not try your own culture? As a white, middle-class, middle-age male, I'm considering "Guy Who Likes Pumpkin Spice Lattes" or "Guy Who Doesn't Own a Television."

For a woman it's almost the same. Just add a fascinator. Retweet if you agree!

National Cat Day is a seemingly weekly event that provides Twitter users with a novel opportunity to share pictures of their felines online. Kevin Richardson is a man who knows his way around a cat, particularly the lions of South Africa. And while National Cat Day has passed, it seems as good an excuse as any to show the amazing GoPro footage captured when he strapped one to the back of a lioness. Warning to the sensitive: Eventually the cat finds some prey, and things don't go well for it at all. (GoPro/YouTube)

RE: Jian Ghomeshi Case Highlights Why Some Women Don't Report Assaults: Column, published online Oct. 27, 2014 I would like to commend Ruth Davenport on her column pertaining to the Ghomeshi debacle. She conveyed the sentiments of many women, but also of many men, like myself, who are offended by the systematic abuse of both men and women (but mainly women) under the guise of consenting personal sexual preferences. The CBC has an image/brand to protect and if it is made public that anyone in their employ acts in a manner that is contrary to that image/brand then I feel they pretty much have the right to dismiss (them). More importantly, women (or men) that have suffered abuse should be encouraged by our law enforcement to come forward and testify and not subjected to the negative attitudes that currently prevail. Victims should be protected. Steve Reeve, Toronto

Lost on many viewers is that Macdonald's trust-worthy sidekick is supposed to suck.

"I wanted to do a talk show that magnified everything, where the host makes fun of the sidekick, but I wanted to be really mean to him," says Macdonald, 51, from his home in L.A., where he's currently working on his memoirs.

"I couldn't do that with a comedian because they'd push back and there wouldn't be much in it for them. This guy (Eget) where I work out of at The Comedy Store in L.A., he's the GM there and he's a guy that everyone makes fun of. So I just said, 'Oh, he'd be a good guy because he'd not care.' He takes it, he's a good guy."

Whereas young people, they have less stories, they're not really very interesting, and they make sure they don't say anything bad about anyone."

One of Macdonald's favourite flap-jawed fossils was 91-year-old comic Jack Carter, a frequent guest of The Ed Sullivan Show and a man who doesn't look a day over 91.

Carrey isn't the type to marry ... for a third time

Jim Carrey is no longer the marrying kind, apparently. "I just don't see it as necessary at this point," the twice-divorced 52-year-old grandfather tells Howard Stern during an interview. "Is it really sacred? I don't know."

Deep, probing questions, to be sure. But more telling seems to be what years of fame seem to have done to Carrey's outlook on romance in general: "If you hook up with someone who is famous, you become a sellable commodity and that's the most important thing in those magazines," he says.

"It's not what you're doing in the movie. It's who you are with, what are you doing, are you breaking up?"

And I'm sure that after hearing such a good point about the whole business, Stern immediately abstained from asking any further questions about Carrey's personal life.

Clooney party inconveniences commoners

NED EHRBAR
Metro in Hollywood

It turns out that entertaining George Clooney and Amal Alamuddin can be bad for business. A recent soiree thrown by the newlyweds at the Danesfield House hotel in Buckinghamshire, England, left other guests feeling a bit overlooked. Clooney's fabulous, swanky affair apparently necessitated renting out half the hotel's rooms.

One guest posted to TripAdvisor, "Booked afternoon tea two months in advance for very special occasion for family, never got to go as was canceled one week beforehand due to exclusive event taking over the hotel. ... Won't book with them again."

Sounds like something out of Downton Abbey, honestly.

I don't have a lot of rules for myself and I don't take myself that seriously." But what do you do, Katie? Aside from humour People magazine when they ask about the divorce you've made it clear you don't want to talk about? Although I can see that takes up a lot of your time.

Wang throws down the new urban uniform for H&M

Style. The designer's take on day-to-night dressing includes a stop at the gym

A quick scan of the crowd gathered for Alexander Wang's H&M debut revealed the fashion set's new unofficial uniform: sleek black everything and sneakers.

It seems that every editor present ditched her stilettos for the multi-part extravaganza — which included a morning press conference downtown, an evening fashion show way uptown, followed by an after-hours pop-up shop and concert — which was totally fitting.

Wang has championed effortless, off-duty dressing since launching his label in 2004. For Spring '15, the designer drew inspiration from “the phenomenon of sneaker culture.” Now his much-hyped H&M collaboration takes on active wear.

“A lot of my friends are gym fanatics and go to SoulCycle,” explains Wang about the starting point for his capsule.

The designer, who has a sixth sense for how tastemakers want to dress, stresses that these days sporty clothes aren't just relegated to the gym.

“There's a lot of people like me: I'm not an athlete, I don't work out, but I wear gym clothes almost everyday,” he says.

Further proving his point that fashion-inspired fitness is a thing, Beyoncé recently announced a new partnership with TopShop to produce an athletic streetwear label.

“People have such active lifestyles that they want to be comfortable. They want to be able to move and take the subway and run around,” says Wang.

If there's anyone who understands our fast-paced lives, full of multitasking and meals on the go, it's Wang. In addition to designing his eponymous multi-million dollar brand, the 30-year-old was named creative director of Balenciaga in 2012. And somewhere in the mix he managed to create this collection for the Swedish fast-fashion retailer — which, he stressed, isn't a lower-priced version of his greatest hits. These designs are brand new.

“For me I always try to push forward and discover a new conversation that I haven't necessarily done before, while staying very true to the approach of ease, the approach of being unpreten-tious, the approach of being comfortable,” he says.

Sporty clothing fits the requirements. Specifically, says Wang, “the idea of sports at night.” Anyone who's attended a Wang after-party knows that the designer prefers to burn his calories on the dance floor.

Cutout scuba dresses, tech-inspired leggings and quick-drying crop tops work just as well at the club as they would at, say, Equinox. The technical construction behind athletic wear was another draw for Wang.

“I'm not trying to reinvent the wheel,” says the designer. “I love fashion; it's fun, and I think it should be celebrated.”

The yum factor in bitter bites

In some places (think Italy and parts of Asia), bitter flavours are appreciated. In North America, sweet and savoury nab the culinary spotlight. Jennifer McLagan is out to change that with her book Bitter.

Through science, culture, history and 100 recipes, McLagan explores bitter bites in all of their aspects and makes a case for the misunderstood flavour.

Recipes include Arugula Pizza, Cardoon Beef Tagine, Methi and Spinach with Baked Eggs, Rapini with Penne, Grapefruit Tart and more. METRO

White Asparagus with Blood Orange Sauce.

A Halloween-worthy dinner accompaniment

"If you can't find blood oranges you can use a regular orange, but the flavour won't be quite the same," writes Jennifer McLagan in her book Bitter.

"This sauce is an orange butter sauce made exactly the same way you would make a white butter sauce (beurre blanc), but using orange juice instead of wine. The cream is added to make the sauce more stable.

"Two important things to remember when making this sauce: use a heavy pan that transfers the heat slowly and evenly, and watch carefully as you whisk in the butter. If your sauce overheats, you can let it cool down slightly, add a splash of water, and whisk it back together."

1. Cook the asparagus (place in a pan of boiling water so they are in a single layer. Lower the heat and simmer for 15-25 minutes. You want them cooked, not crunchy).

2. While the asparagus is cooking, finely grate the zest from the orange and then squeeze the juice. Place both the zest and the juice in a small saucepan and bring to a boil over medium high heat. Reduce the heat and boil gently until the mixture is reduced to about 2 tablespoons. Stir in the cream and season with salt and pepper.

3. Drain the cooked asparagus and keep warm in a low oven.

4. Cut the butter into 6 pieces. Place the pan with the juice and cream mixture over very low heat and slowly whisk in the butter, thoroughly incorporating each piece before adding another. While you're whisking, keep the sauce warm, but not hot, so that the mixture emulsifies and the butter doesn't melt into the sauce. When all the butter is incorporated, taste, adjust the seasoning, and serve over the cooked asparagus.

Side. Grilled Radicchio with Creamy Cheese

1. Cut the radicchio heads into quarters and drizzle with olive oil, turning to lightly coat the pieces. Season with salt and pepper.

2. Heat a gas grill to medium, or set a heavy cast-iron pan over medium heat. When it is hot, add the radicchio and cook, turning often, until it is soft, brown in color, and lightly charred, about 12 minutes. Cut the cheese into pieces.

3. Transfer the radicchio to a serving dish. Top with pieces of the cheese and sprinkle with the balsamic vinegar. The heat of the radicchio will melt the cheese.

Clamp legs bring something new to the table

DIY. Legs with built-in clamps can turn any surface material into an easily portable, one-of-a-kind table

Furnishing a home that will create a lasting impression can sometimes be difficult to accomplish without the right resources. It's not always easy to find time to browse countless home and furniture stores. With the help of clamp legs, customizing furniture has never been easier.

These innovative table legs are equipped with built-in clamps at the top of each leg. The four legs help support the weight of the surface material while the integrated clamps at the top of each leg help hold everything in place and give it stability. Clamp legs provide endless possibilities for creating personalized tables, stools, and benches.

What you need to know

Giants held off the Kansas City Royals 3-2 Wednesday night in Game 7 of the World Series for their third championship in five seasons.

With both starters chased early, this became a matchup of bullpens. And no one stood taller than the six-foot-five Bumgarner, who added to his post-season legacy with a third victory this Series.

After Gregor Blanco misplayed Alex Gordon's drive for a single and two-base error, Bumgarner got Salvador Perez to pop foul to third baseman Pablo Sandoval for the final out.

The Giants ended a Series streak that had seen home teams win the last nine Game 7s. San Francisco took this pairing of wild-card teams after earning titles in 2012 and 2010.

Pitching on two days' rest after his shutout in Game 5, Bumgarner entered in the fifth with a 3-2 lead. After giving up a leadoff single to Omar Infante, he shut down the Royals.

Jets wasting defensive rarity at right wing

THE HOCKEY NEWS
Ronnie Shuker
winnipeg@metronews.ca

It's like putting a quarterback at wide receiver. Sure, he can memorize play patterns, run routes and catch the ball, but he can't control the game unless he's behind the centre where he can see the whole field.

That's what coach Paul Maurice and the Winnipeg Jets brass are doing to Dustin Byfuglien, and no good has come of it so far. He's struggling mightily, and the Jets are just treading water. If Byfuglien continues to labour up front, and Winnipeg falls behind the Central Division pack, the demand to shift him back to defence will only get louder.

And so it should. Byfuglien has that rare combination of size and skill in a defenceman to dominate a game, and the Jets are squandering it.

The arguments for both sides of the right wing vs. defence Byfuglien debate are well documented. So rather than rehash it all, here's an interesting case study with another mammoth right winger/defenceman: Brent Burns of the San Jose Sharks.

Burns is six-foot-five, 235 pounds and in his 11th NHL

Numbers take a dip

Byfuglien's Fenwick for % (unblocked shot attempts with him on the ice):

- 2013-14 — 50.8
- 2014-15 — 45.9

season. Byfuglien is six-foot-five, 260 pounds and in his 10th NHL season. Both are 29, born 18 days apart in March. Burns has 101 goals and 300 points in his career, while Byfuglien's numbers are slightly better at 117 and 302. And they've logged nearly identical average ice times over their careers at 19:45 and 19:58, respectively.

This season, however, they're heading in different directions.

After switching back to defence, Burns is leading all NHL defencemen with 12 points, including four goals in 11 games. Byfuglien, meanwhile, is foundering up front with just two goals and three points through nine.

Burns was a beast as a forward last season, with 22 goals and 48 points in 69 games, but the Sharks had to move him back to defence, and they knew it. Big, mobile, elite defencemen are at a premium in the NHL. And when you have one, you don't waste him by putting him out of position, even if he performs well.

No one doubts Byfuglien can be every bit as beastly at right wing as Burns was last season, but his upside is much higher on defence. From the back end, he can quarterback the offence for nearly half of every game, not just on the power play.

Think Zdeno Chara at 80 per cent effective. That's Byfuglien on defence. It's not potential. The previous four seasons — in which he averaged better than 50 points per — are proof. It's time for the Jets to put their quarterback back under centre.

Stroke. 'Mr. Hockey' has a long path to recovery

Gordie Howe has a long way to go to recover from a stroke he suffered over the weekend, his son said Wednesday amid an outpouring of support from the hockey community.

"Mr. Hockey" has shown some signs of improvement from what son Mark called a "pretty significant stroke" and is resting at his daughter Cathy's home in Lubbock, Texas.

"It's a difficult time for Dad," Mark Howe said in a phone interview from Lubbock. "It definitely impacted his life, so we're dealing with this, I think, as all families do and just trying to be there. The best thing we can do is just be here and be supportive and try to keep him in good spirits."

Sons Mark, Marty and Murray travelled from their respective homes in New Jersey, Connecticut and Ohio on Tuesday to be with their father, who has been in declining health for the past year. Gordie Howe is 86 and also suffers from a form of dementia.

In a statement thanking family, friends and fans for their support, the Howe family said that "Dad's spirits are good and his competitive attitude remains strong."

Concerns for Howe and hopes for his recovery have poured in from across the hockey world and beyond since news of his stroke emerged Tuesday afternoon. Mark Howe, who has been a scout for the Detroit Red Wings for the past 20 years, estimated his father had 375 text messages, a volume surpassed only by the time he was inducted into the Hockey Hall of Fame.

"Obviously Dad, he's touched so many people in his life in such a positive way," he said. "That's reflected in so many of the well-wishes and prayers that we've received."

Prime Minister Stephen Harper posted a message of encouragement on Twitter, and coaches Mike Babcock and Dallas Eakins talked about Howe's health Wednesday.

"If there's anybody that can recover from that, it's that tough old bird," Eakins, who coaches the Oilers, told reporters in Edmonton.

Bombers' season cut short by losing record

Willy or won't he?

Drew Willy coach's choice for most outstanding player for Blue Bombers

Analysis

Bombers at Stampeders, Saturday, 3 p.m.

What started so positively comes to a crashing halt for Winnipeg (6-11). The Bombers opened the season 5-1 but have just one victory since and dropped eight straight. Quarterback Drew Willy was sacked 10 times in last weekend's 28-23 loss to B.C. Calgary (14-2) has clinched first in the West and can rest key veterans but roster depth has been key for a team that's a CFL-best 7-1 at McMahon Stadium.

Pick: Calgary

He's closing in on 4,000 yards passing but couldn't get his Winnipeg Blue Bombers into the playoffs, yet quarterback Drew Willy is still coach Mike O'Shea's nominee for the team's most outstanding player this season.

"I think that's an easy choice," O'Shea said Wednesday.

"He missed a game, so if he's in for that game he probably throws for over 4,000. He won us a bunch of games early. He's been a good player for us, very good. He's the guy you build everything around."

Willy is a former Saskatchewan backup pivot who made his debut as a starter this season with the Bombers and has already passed for 3,747 yards. That's good for second on the CFL's passing list behind Toronto's Ricky Ray.

Willy will start again Saturday when the Bombers (6-11) bring the curtain down on their disappointing season in Calgary against the Stampeders (14-2). This is the third season in a row the Bombers have missed the playoffs.

The Bombers saw their faint playoff hopes disappear last Saturday when they dropped a 28-23 decision to the B.C. Lions.

Despite their problems, they've had some outstanding performances from some players besides Willy.

Receiver Clarence Denmark has followed through with his pre-season promise and topped 1,000 yards for the first time in his four years in the CFL. He's currently at 1,022 yards, second only to Edmonton's Adarius Bowman.

The Bombers also scored big in rookie kicker Lirim Hajrullahu. The native of St. Catharines, Ont., came out of Western and his 141 points are good for third on the CFL kicking points list right now.

And if that wasn't impressive enough, he's had to handle punting duties as well because of Mike Renaud's injury issues. Hajrullahu has averaged a respectable 43.8 yards a punt.

O'Shea acknowledges both, despite favouring Willy for the team's top honour.

"Clarence Denmark's had a very, very good season. Without throwing the ball, he doesn't get those yards, right?" he said of his top receiver.

Denmark's performance has been all the more important to Winnipeg with high-profile free agent signing Nick Moore out of action for much of the season with injuries.

"(Hajrullahu's) done very well for us, we put him in some tough positions too, asking him to punt on no notice," O'Shea said of his rookie kicker. "He's proven to be a professional. It's good to have him."

Denmark certainly isn't crowing, or even looking forward to next season yet, with Calgary still in his sights.

"Not yet, we're really trying to focus on this game," said the soft-spoken native of Jacksonville, Fla. "Next season will come but we don't want to just lose again. We want to end the season on a positive note."

April 21 - May 21

If someone reacts in an emotional way to what you say today then perhaps you should take the hint and steer clear of touchy issues.

♊ Gemini

May 22 - June 21

You have a number of duties to attend to and, although you might prefer to ignore them, you feel honour bound to do what is expected of you. You'll be rewarded.

♋ Cancer

June 22 - July 23

If you try to limit someone's freedom today, it could rebound on you. Better to give them the space they require. It's unlikely they will wander too far without your approval.

♌ Leo

July 24 - Aug. 23

You may not get the results you expected today but don't worry — in the greater scheme of things you are making substantial progress.

♍ Virgo

Aug. 24 - Sept. 23

A change of scene will do you a world of good over the next 24 hours and could even lead to a financial opportunity you might otherwise have missed.

♎ Libra

Sept. 24 - Oct. 23

Fix your attention on a certain situation and learn as much as you can. The more you know, the better placed you will be to benefit from coming upheavals.

♏ Scorpio

Oct. 24 - Nov. 22

Make a conscious decision to go with the flow and don't think of it as a defeat if you have to change your plans at the last moment.

♐ Sagittarius

Nov. 23 - Dec. 21

You may feel as if you are getting nowhere fast but on a deeper level you are in fact making considerable progress.

♑ Capricorn

Dec. 22 - Jan. 20

You may know what is wrong with a certain situation but you are not in a position to put it right. The planets warn you should leave well alone. The cosmic picture will change over the next few days.

♒ Aquarius

Jan. 21 - Feb. 19

Your mind may be bursting with big ideas but what use are they if you don't knit them together into a coherent and workable plan? Push those big ideas down to a human level.

♓ Pisces

Feb. 20 - March 20

Someone you haven't seen for a while will come back into your life and the effect on your feelings could be dramatic. Don't get carried away. They've changed a lot, and so have you.
